David du Toit, MA (Sociology)

After being a tutor in Industrial Sociology and Political Sociology for three years and upon completion of my Masters' Degree in Sociology in the Sociology of Work, I applied for a post at the University of North West (Potchefstroom campus) as a junior lecturer. Currently, I have quite a heavy teaching load - teaching Research Methodology for third year's as well as Sociology of work for second year's and Political Sociology for third years. I have full control of each of these modules and I have to create PowerPoint slides from scratch and tests etc. This is quite a challenge.

Jan Anton Hough

He is currently affiliated to Coastal & Environmental Services (CES) in Graham's town as an Environmental Consultant. He has a strong research interest in the socio-environmental field, and has published numerous reports on issues within this field, as well as an article in the South African Geographical Journal (with Heidi Prozesky as co-author). The article considers conceptualizations of the Baviaanskloof Nature Reserve and its protection from the perspective of a local community within the reserve.

Golden Key South Africa has recently recognised the fact that he made the list of the top 15% of academic achievers at the University of Stellenbosch.

Michon Motzouris, Hons/MA (Sociology)

After completing my Honours in Sociology and enrolling for a Masters, I was offered a position Research Intern at the Institute for Security Studies (ISS) from April 2011 to December 2011. My duties included research and writing on issues of security privatisation in Africa, (the subject of my Masters Dissertation), including the involvement of the industry in maritime security and post-conflict reconstruction. During this time I also edited monographs and papers, attended and made presentations at a wide range of conferences and seminars, dealing mainly with issues of human security in Africa. My new position is with the United States Embassy, where I will be working for the Open Source Centre as an East African Analyst. My job is to monitor regional print, electronic and broadcast media, and prepare written and multimedia analytic reports on regional developments.

Sunel van Hoving, Hons (Sociology)

During my Honours year I was the teaching assistant for Industrial Sociology and Political Sociology, which really honed my administrative skills. After completing my Honours Degree in Sociology, I decided to enter the job market. My first position was as a Researcher & Assistant Project Manager (full-time) at KIO Advisory Services: Here I conducted research on JSE listed companies' boards of directors. Duties included data gathering, capturing and cleaning; statistical analysis using software called Statistical Package for Social Science (SPSS) and report writing. Other duties relating to project management included scheduling meetings, preparing presentations, taking meeting minutes, managing the project plan, compiling a risk matrix, and preparing weekly status update presentations. An opportunity then arose to work at Lancet Laboratories in their Human Resources department. At present I hold the position of HR Support consultant where I am responsible for providing operational reports to HR HODs on a daily basis, supporting employees with any queries related to the HR information system (HRIS), chasing HR related deadlines, and assist in managing the HRIS project.
